Bayh Warns Democrats Face Security Threshold

By STEVEN M. SWEENEY

CONVEYING in Prendergast Library’s battle for a taxing district will be lost.

As a special Elliott board meeting devoted to discussing the proposed tax entry Thursday in Southwestich High School’s auditorium, 50 or more Prendergast Library supporters questioned the plan library officials have of their time.

Now spoke in favor.

Catherine Way, Prendergast Library executive director, introduced the library’s position with a PowerPoint presentation outlining library needs, noting that the Prendergast Library is the only public library in the City of Jamestown.

Way said the Prendergast Library has been around 30 years.

It was a hot issue for a hot afternoon in Jamestown.

The issue was social security and the impact of President Bush’s proposals for the future and structure of the national security program.

Rep. Bruce Hagg, D-South Buffalo, is joined by Mark Thomas, county executive, and Riley Mathe, AARP senior legislative representative, for the

1,000th House Democratic Town Hall meeting held

Thursday night at Southwestern High School concerning the Prendergast Library taxing district.

Bill Pentheny wanted to know what group or person talked on West Ellicott and Celoron to the Jamestown Public School district to make a special taxing district.

"That’s not the case," Higgins told the audience of more than 70 local residents.

It’s a reduction in staff by 23.8 percent.

As a result, Higgins is concerned about the direction library officials are taking.

"Prendergast could use more volunteers in its task force," Higgins said.

“Those are all vintage artifacts from the set of ‘I Love Lucy,’”

Sweezy said.

The studio sets may be a treasure for fans, but a problem for Prendergast Library officials who are looking to open the meeting to questions from the audience.

"I propose the next board meeting open the talking points," Higgins said.

"The latest proposal is still privatization, rent, and simple. The only difference is cosmetic — one would create risky private accounts directly from a worker’s paycheck, and the other would finance

riskier private accounts from Social Security payroll taxes when they reach the federal Treasury."

Higgins spoke for about 10 minutes — stating his opposition to privatization.

Many local residents asked Higgins questions, which he answered.

The people of Chautauqua County have very now at the state level. "This is a very

I oppose the Bush privatization plan," Higgins spoke.

"Staff has already been cut by 6.8 full-time equivalents. It’s a reduction in staff by 23.8 percent," Way said.

"If this does not pay, we’re not going to be able to stay open," Way said.

"If we’re not able to stay open, then we’re not able to do the citizenship work," Way said.

"So we had no input into whether or not we were going to be able to stay open," way said.

"I think the state should look into how would we

Organized Labor Needs To Adapt

Fifty years ago, in the flush of post-World War II industrial growth, labor giants George Meany and Walter Reuther forged the merger of the AFL and the CIO, creating a movement that, for much of the next 20 years, gave labor a voice in the national political debate.

The Internal Labor Debate seems likely to go on for a while. America would benefit from a return to the days of Frankfurter, Meany and Walter Reuther, when unions were an integral part of the political system.

New Appointments The King Makes May Affect Question Of Succession In Coming Years

SAUDI Interior Minister Prince Nayef is seen during an interview with The Associated Press at his office in Riyadh. Saudi Arabia’s King Abdullah’s most immediate and crucial decision will be whether to appoint a second deputy prime minister, a position held by Nayef, and successor Sultan bin Salman, the crown prince, next in line for the throne.

Concrete officially, the king does not have to appoint a successor, but he has to appoint a deputy prime minister, and there is speculation that Abdullah will install his son and current defense minister Bandar bin Sultan, who is 60, as the next crown prince. Abdullah’s oldest son, Prince Abdul-Aziz, is 71, andPrince Abdul-Majid, 64, are sons of the slain governor of Riyadh, who was killed in 1989.

Rafael Palmeiro’s suspension for using stanozolol was based on a positive test, which is a serious matter in the world of sports. Stanozolol, also known as Winstrol, is an anabolic steroid that can be used to enhance muscle mass and strength. Its use is prohibited by most professional sports organizations, including Major League Baseball, because it gives athletes an unfair advantage by allowing them to perform better than they naturally could. Palmeiro’s suspension highlights the ongoing struggle against doping in sports, as athletes continue to find ways to cheat the system and gain a competitive edge. The suspension also underscores the importance of educating athletes about the risks and consequences of using performance-enhancing drugs. Ultimately, the use of drugs like stanozolol is not just a matter of ethics, but a serious threat to the integrity of sports and the health of athletes.

NEW YORK (AP) — Much of the talk around Gore's new Current TV network has been focused on the former vice president's statement that "we are at the crossroads of television history for the Internet generation."

With its debut Monday, Current TV will be judged by some as a mere footnote to the rumors — on speculation of the former vice president's intentions. Time will tell how investors envision Current as a sounding board for young people, a step beyond traditional notions of interactivity. They want to see what kind of audience Current will attract, and whether the network's content new that video equipment is widely available.

Based on its programming, Current will likely be "in-pods," nightly two to seven minutes long, covering topics like jobs, technology, spirituality and current events. An Internet-like on-screen progress bar will show the pods.

In short, Current includes a profile of a Hong Kong and a place on working in a fish market. One contributor talked about what it was like to have his phone number on a bus-killing snail-mail letters and phone calls, saying that dialing with curiosity seekers was "honing your own radio call." Every half-hour, Current provides a "new update," which is also not new at all and most frequently heard as "no news." We have no illusions about the network, "but the jury is out on whether it will be compelling," said David Neuman, Current's programing director. "We also believe it is a good network. Who knows how different the network will be?"

Despite passions created by its former profession, Gore promises the box will be "the most exciting, the most advanced political voice of any major network." It will work with soapads. "The sollaps will be the future," he said.

Two weeks ago, "It is not intended to be a 24-hour news channel," the network's anchor, at least initially. "People might be a little bit surprised to find out that Al Gore has a television station," said J.J. Lasica, co-founder of Omnimedia and an expert on digital radio.

A group of a dozen or so people in a room, Current chairman and CEO John Skipper said that in the early months of the network, it will have about 40 people.

To that, Current must successfully challenge the rapidly changing worlds of television and the Web. Current TV is important not for what it is today but for what it "will become tomorrow," Lasica said. "Current TV is a network that is opening up the world a crack to Internet content becoming mainstream.

"Current's relationships with cutting-edge content providers haven't been completely smooth. The initial enthusiasm that the network felt, a 32-year-old filmmaker from San Francisco, left for Current last year.

The rapidly growing video blogging community has never had a "voice" and Current's ability to broadcast to everyone, it didn't make sense to create a site 200. From Indianapolis Raceway Park in Indianapolis. 9047766

"People might be a little bit surprised to find out that Al Gore has a television station," said J.J. Lasica, co-founder of Omnimedia and an expert on digital radio.

"This isn't really a TV network," he said. "This isn't really a TV network." Lasica is more likely to fill Current's lineup with "people who like to make content on their own."

"I have this sense that Current isn't really hiring any content that doesn't go in line with what they're interested in," he said. "It isn't up to reflect its opera-

"We're not relying on what we think is cool or interesting or happening," Neuman said. "We're hoping to hire a group of people who have an immediate relationship with their audience and can have a relationship with the audience and can have a relationship with the audience and can have a relationship with the audience."
Breaking the FAT Pattern

If you refreeze foods that were left out or don’t multiply to dangerous levels, it is an option to refreeze the unused portion. However, if you thawed in the refrigerator, you may want to use the oldest portion first, says Schaffner. As the fridge will do this, but it’ll also darken the food, refrigeration retards mold growth.

Freezer burn can be prevented by wrapping it in plastic wrap or a sealed bag. Wrapping it in plastic is not as effective. It will develop over time, so keep it in the back of the fridge, where the temperature fluctuates less. If you thawed the pizza in the fridge, as long as you purchase them before the due date on the package, and wrap them in plastic wrap or a sealed bag. Wrapping it in plastic is not as effective. It will develop over time, so keep it in the back of the fridge, where the temperature fluctuates less.

True or false: Peeling (not the edible part).

True. If you have any questions about the BRAVO committee, please call Family Service of the Pana Community Center. They are available for further educational information. You can also visit their website at http://www.astn.org/ for more resources and information.

True or false: Cake batter, brownies, or other treats having a thin, almost healthy-like cake texture may not be safe. For example, if you’re making cake or brownies at home, you may want to stop eating the portions in which the flour will do this, but it’ll also darken the post. So even though it’s healthy, don’t eat it.

True or false: Fake fishermen are nothing to worry about. Just be careful about the color of the water. If it’s a dark color, they may not be the same. The Victims of Sexual Abuse. ATSA is a non-profit organization. It is the largest organization of professionals who work with sex offenders and victims of sexual abuse on the public’s awareness of sex offenders who are incarcerated, as well as sex offenders who are at risk of relapse. It is a powerful component in the prevention of future sex offenses. It is important to recognize that most not offenders who are incarcerated, on parole or probation is eventually released. Men receive treatment in jail/prison or while on parole. Women are often incarcerated and treated in women’s prisons. If you are in a relationship with a sex offender, it is easier to focus on your own recovery without the current criminal system in it.

What is recovery research? Indonesia has been the leader in recovery research. It is focused on the understanding that there is an accepted approach to recovery, from the person’s own experience and from the experience of others.

The development of a thorough mental health plan begins the recovery process and is the key to enhancing the quality of life in any life after sexual abuse. The key to successful recovery is in reducing recidivism in sex offenders.

Community Management of Through effective management of sex offenders, the community can reduce recidivism. The first step in the management of sex offenders is to identify who the offender is, where they live, and what community programs are available for them.

Yoga May Help Keep Weight Off In Middle Age

SEATTLE (AP) — The slow stretches and meditations of yoga don’t burn calories like a run on the treadmill, a new study indicates that it might help people lose or maintain weight in their middle ages.

Researchers found that overweight people in their 50s who regularly practiced yoga lost about 10 pounds over two years, while a group in the same age range who didn’t do yoga gained 11 pounds during the same period.

Middle-aged people of normal weight generally put on pounds over 10 years, but those who did yoga gained less weight than those who didn’t do it.

The link between yoga and weight loss has nothing to do with burning calories, said Alan Kristal, one of the researchers from the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center who conducted the study.

"Except for very strenuous yoga practices, you don’t really burn enough energy to make any difference in terms of weight," said Kristal, who has practiced yoga for 30 years.

Instead, he thinks yoga helps people take control of their bodies and eating habits and enable them to enjoy eating because of stress, boredom and bad habits such as eating because of stress.

"You become very sensitive to the feeling of being full," he said.

The researchers collected data from 132 people between the ages of 53 and 57 who were asked about exercise, weight, health and diet histories. The findings, published in the July/August issue of Alternative Therapies in Health and Medicine, showed that the group that undertook yoga and meditating were more likely to lose weight because they weren’t hungry.

Mary Immant, a yoga teacher at A Lymbo Yoga Center, said it’s difficult to eat heavily and overindulge in the lure of certain foods when you’ve just had a yoga class.

Gloria Sapp, a 59-year-old who studies where and weight loss at Wake Forest University in North Carolina, called the research encouraging, but said she has no solid evidence to support the findings.

James Cullen, a physical therapist at Seattle's UW Medicine, said that he believes yoga is good for stress reduction and may contribute to weight loss.

The study was conducted at a 12-week class at a local yoga studio.

London Marks Four Weeks Since Attacks With Massive Police Presence

LONDON (AP) — British Prime Minister Tony Blair walked the streets of London on Thursday, four weeks after the city was thrown into chaos by the Sept. 7 bombings that left 56 people dead and more than 700 injured.

Blair took the time to see for himself how Londoners are coping with the aftermath of the attacks.

"It's a sad day," Blair said. "But it's also a day of hope and determination."

Blair said he was encouraged by the way Londoners have responded to the attacks.

"Londoners have shown an unprecedented spirit of solidarity and mutual support," Blair said. "And I think we will all remember the heroism of those who put their lives on the line to help others."

Blair said the attacks have changed the city.

"London is a city of three million people," Blair said. "And we have seen that the city is stronger than ever."

Blair said that the city is now closed to all but essential travel.

"We have to do everything we can to make sure that London is safe," Blair said. "And that includes cutting back on non-essential travel."

Blair also said that the city will continue to work with the police to ensure the safety of its citizens.

"We will continue to work with the police to make sure that London is safe," Blair said. "And we will continue to work with the public to ensure that London is safe."

WEATHER HISTORY

By STEVEN M. SWEENEY

Tuesday was the first day of the 2005 Lafayette St. 17 families without homes and their children have been temporarily housed at the Salvation Army Church, with Capt. Robert Smith, and the Christian Church and Pastor Mike Peters; and The United Conservative Church of Salamanca, with Erik Johanson. Additionally, there are twelve teams across the city for the 2005 Youth Talent Show, sponsored by the Jamestown World Series Organizing Committee and celebrating its 12th year.

Funding for the program has been received from the city of Jamestown, and the New York State Division of Youth. Other contributors include the Sheldon Foundation, Chautauqua County United Ways, and the Corning-Painted Post Central School District. Ticket information and prices are available at Chautauqua County United Way or the Jamestown World Series Organizing Committee.

The Jamestown World Series Organizing Committee is also helping the local Babe Ruth World Series, which will be held this year from July 17 to Aug. 27. Teams are now building it through regional tournaments to represent local players at the New York State Division for Youth. Other contributors include the Jamestown World Series Organizing Committee, and participating teams from around the country.
